

Latin literature and the Classical World in Early Modern Scotland

June 22nd 2013

University of Glasgow

We are pleased to announce a one day conference on 'Latin literature and the Classical World in Early Modern Scotland', which will take place on June 22nd 2013 at the University of Glasgow.

Please do not hesitate to contact me either to register for the conference or for any and all queries (full conference programme and flyers are available on request).

We look forward to welcoming you all to Glasgow for this exciting event.

Dr David McOmish
DPS Latin Project
School of Humanities/Sgoil nan Daonnachdan
10 University Gardens
The University of Glasgow G12 8QQ
Tel: 00 44 (0)141 330 8753
Email: david.mcomish@glasgow.ac.uk
Website: <http://www.dps.gla.ac.uk/>

Conference Programme

*09:30-10:00am Coffee and registration

*10:00am Introduction (Steven Reid)

*10:00-11:00am Dana F. Sutton (California Irvine): 'The Influence of George Buchanan on the Next Generation of Scottish Neo-Latin Poets'

*11:00-12:00 Luke Houghton (Glasgow): 'The Scottish Fourth Eclogue'

*12:00-12:30 David McOmish and Steven Reid (Glasgow): A re-enactment of the Latin 'flyting' between Andrew Melville and Hercules Rollock (should be dramatic, and a lot of fun!)

*12:30-13:30 Lunch (catered)

*13:30-14:30 Alex Farquhar (St Cross College, Oxford): Arthur Johnston in Padua (1615-16): Philosopher, Physician and Poet

*14:30-15:30 Will Poole (New College, Oxford): 'Peter Goldman: A Dundee poet and physician in the republic of letters'

*15:30-15:45 Coffee

*15:45-16:30 Round Table, hosted by Professor Roger Green (Glasgow): Latin Literature in Early Modern Scotland